THE THEME

LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE, NORTH OF THE 45th PARALLEL

Have the Nordic countries of the Western world forgotten the winter season? Urban design and regional planning end up proposing more and more cities with no season, no climate, no night... Have we lost track of our reality?

To live up north is an art by itself and just as Italy started the slowfood movement, the Nordic countries could promote winter living as a desirable and healthy way of life.

To take winter by storm means having to cohabit with coldness, winds, snow and longer nights...It's appreciating a uniqueness in light, odours and sounds that one can never forget. It's creating new and unique tourist attractions and pleasures intensified by winter...

Having winter in mind means respecting and celebrating harsh conditions in our projects. It's using extreme climates, dramatic season changes, intensity of daylight and colours as inspiring sources of discovery and creativity in design. It's creating spaces that will promote outdoor living and encourage human beings to stay physically active despite the cold. These are major responsibilities that we, as landscape architects, must face and promote through our concepts and design.

Over time, Nordic cities have lost their natural rhythm and must now reclaim it. Let's be part of this back to basic movement!
