

CSLA's DRAFT Statement on Landscape Architecture and Reconciliation

For comment, discussion, feedback

At the recent 2019 CSLA Congress in Vancouver, the CSLA's Reconciliation Advisory Committee heard important messages about the profession and reconciliation. The RAC sees opportunity for getting feedback on, and improving, the CSLA's DRAFT Statement on Landscape Architecture and Reconciliation. Please help us strengthen this statement by contributing to the discussion.

Thank you!

The Reconciliation Advisory Committee (Chris Grosset, Chair, Grant Fahlgren, James Thomas and Michelle Legault)

Please consider the following questions. Note: the Statement can be found on page 2 of this document :

Are the pillars are correct? Should they be expanded?

How do we articulate why reconciliation is important to landscape architecture?

Should more emphasis be placed on how a landscape architect is going to action this in their practice?

Are there any other improvements you think the RAC should bring to the statement?

In 2015 the CSLA and its nine component associations ratified the Canadian Landscape Charter (CLC). Through the CLC, the CSLA upholds the following core principles:

- Recognize landscapes as vital
- Consider all peoples
- Inspire stewardship
- Show leadership
- Expand knowledge

These core principles are the foundation on which the CSLA's Reconciliation Advisory Committee (RAC) was founded, originally as a Task Force, on November 6th, 2016. The RAC was mandated to consider the Calls to Action by the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC) "to guide the CSLA in improving awareness and capacity for supporting Canada's First Nations, Inuit, and Métis Peoples through landscape architecture and land use planning within our leadership, membership and schools of landscape architecture." About the Statement

This statement was developed by the CSLA's Reconciliation Advisory Committee (RAC) and approved by the CSLA Board on INSERT APPROVAL DATE AFTER CONSULTATION AND APPROVAL. The statement is based on input gathered from an environmental scan of CSLA component associations, universities, related professional associations, Indigenous organizations and practitioners, and CSLA members. The CSLA acknowledges and appreciates the invaluable contributions provided by the RAC and member volunteers who participated in the environmental scan research.

The Statement

The national effort towards reconciliation with Indigenous peoples is an important issue for the profession of landscape architecture. Landscape architecture offers an interdisciplinary approach that considers our environment in a holistic manner. The principles and goals of landscape architecture in Canada are well aligned with many of the values among Canada's Indigenous cultures. Incorporation and consideration of Indigenous peoples, their values, their voices, and their knowledge in the planning, design and management of the Canadian landscape should be the goal of all landscape architects.

The Truth and Reconciliation Commission defines 'reconciliation' as the establishment and maintenance of a mutually respectful relationship between Indigenous and Non-Indigenous peoples. For that to happen, there has to be:

- acknowledgement of the harm that has been inflicted
- awareness of the past and atonement for the causes, and
- action to change behaviour.

The CSLA's Reconciliation Pillars

Acknowledgement - We recognize and respect the rights of First Nations, Inuit, and Métis Peoples of Canada; and the truth that has been and continues to be lived by every First Nations, Inuit or Métis person and community. Every Indigenous and non-Indigenous Canadian has a responsibility to our shared vision of reconciliation. Through the vision and principles of the CSLA' RAC Action Plan, we aim to acknowledge our responsibilities.

Awareness - Through our policies, programs, advocacy, education, and outreach, the CSLA seeks to affirm the landscapes of First Nations, Inuit, and Métis Peoples of Canada as vital to the process of reconciliation. As landscape architects it is our responsibility to be capable partners with Indigenous Peoples of Canada. We need to be aware of our biases, prejudices, values, world views and the effect those have on our work; and be aware of, acknowledge, understand, and seek to integrate the values and worldviews of Indigenous people.

Engagement - The CSLA is committed to supporting initiatives that encourage establishing and maintaining mutually respectful relationships between the Indigenous Peoples of Canada, the CSLA, members of the CSLA, and Schools of landscape architecture.

The profession's Vision for Reconciliation is a Canada where the CSLA, Component Associations, members, and Schools of Landscape Architecture:

- acknowledge the histories, identities, cultures and rights of the First Nations, Inuit and Metis Peoples of Canada.
- achieve awareness and understanding of Indigenous peoples, landscapes, culture, rights and issues, opportunities and challenges.
- are effective participants in the process of reconciliation.

Reconciliation Principles

The CSLA, which represents the profession of landscape architecture in Canada, pledges to uphold the following reconciliation principles:

Recognizing Indigenous landscapes: By ensuring that the landscapes of Indigenous Peoples of Canada are understood and respected for their geographic, cultural, historic, heritage, social, aesthetic, economic and environmental values, whether as cultural and/or natural features, or as physical and/or abstract entities, whether they are wild, rural or urban.

Respecting Indigenous Peoples of Canada: By increasing the awareness and understanding of the rights, traditional values, knowledge systems and practices of First Nations, Inuit, and Métis Peoples, which relate to customary stewardship of the land, and by considering these values and practices in both management, planning and design.

Being Inspired by Indigenous landscape stewardship: By engaging with Indigenous people to learn about Indigenous knowledge systems and land use practices, Treaty and land rights, governance, self-determination and Indigenous law.

Showing leadership: By inspiring through relationships, knowledge development and sharing, collaboration and outreach amongst First Nations, Inuit, and Métis Peoples of Canada, CSLA, members of the CSLA, and our Schools of Landscape Architecture.
